

PRESS RELEASE

Executive Jets Asia (EJA) has set up a fully owned subsidiary FLYING DOCTORS ASIA (FDA) to specially cater to the growing need in Asia for fast, safe, reliable and comprehensive air ambulance and medical evacuation services.

FLYING DOCTORS ASIA is based at Seletar Airport in Singapore.

Joint CEO of EJA and FDA, Prithpal Singh remarked "EJA has over the last few years been providing a range of services with its executive jets which included corporate executive flights and aero medical evacuation flights. The time has now come for us to cater separately to these growing market segments and the only way we can do so properly is by having 2 separate and distinct identities, aircraft and support services".

Executive Jets Asia will concentrate on providing executive jets for the corporate and business customers and Flying Doctors Asia will now cater exclusively to our many customers who require specialized and comprehensive air ambulance and medical evacuations services.

FDA customers include insurance companies, private individuals who are too sick to travel by commercial airlines, tourists who have fallen sick or have had an accident and need to be evacuated home, NGOs and embassies during natural disasters who wish to repatriate their nationals, private and public hospitals and medical centers.

Furthermore, the rapid growth of medical hubs such as Singapore, Kuala Lumpur and Bangkok is attracting more and more foreign patients and Flying Doctors Asia also caters to their needs as many patients need to get to these medical hubs fast and safely, often under the care of a medical team and from wherever they are.

To cater to this market segment, two jet aircraft have been converted into full fledged flying air ambulances and ready to fly, at most times, within 2 hrs notice to anywhere in the world. A third longer range aircraft will be added in December. All aircraft are based at Seletar Airport.

"To ensure that we provide the very best in any medical emergency, we have established associations with specialist doctors and nurse teams who are experienced aero medical personnel and also specialists in their own respective medical fields".

"Before an air ambulance is dispatched our own in house medical director evaluates every medical case carefully and then selects the most appropriate medical team and equipment to be placed on board which best ensures that patients are best taken care of".

Medical Director for FDA, Dr. Kevin U-Jyn Chan who is himself an experienced aero medical practitioner added " We provide a totally all inclusive "Bed to Bed" service, which simply means that with one phone call we are able to arrange everything from the point the patient is picked up from a foreign hospital or his home in an ambulance, brought to the airport and flown in our fully equipped air ambulance to the destination under the care of our experienced medical team and then taken quickly to the receiving hospital. We even arrange the hospital and liaise with the medical specialist. It's a total one stop service which provides peace of mind to the patients. We also allow up to 3 companions /family members to fly with the patient on our air ambulance jets."
